

What are School-Based Health Centers?---

PCHS has partnered with local schools to provide primary medical and behavioral health care services to students and their families. Giving kids and teens access to health centers at school puts them in a better position to learn.

School-based health centers provide a crucial link between health and education, improving outcomes for students in both areas. With youth-focused health education and services available at school, more students are likely to stay healthy, feel supported, be in class ready to learn, and graduate.

By having health care accessed at the schools, students benefit because they don't have to travel to find a provider or counselor. The child's caregiver benefits because they don't have to take a day off work or spend time waiting to be seen at a clinic. Schools benefit because students spend more time in the classroom.
